Carbon Positive Roadmap Overview

Jorge Chapa, Head of Market Transformation, GBCA

Carbon positive in practice

Session sponsored by Integral Group

How will we achieve carbon positive? Hear case studies exploring aspects of the carbon positive roadmap, and discuss what are the pathways and solutions available to achieve this ambitious target. The objective of the “Carbon positive in practice” session is to provide you with practical takeaways to start thinking and planning the future of your projects and organisation.

11:20 Designing integrated low carbon precincts

The CRC for Low Carbon Living Integrated Carbon Metrics project has developed a suite of tools to quantify carbon emissions in the built environment and provide decision support for designing integrated low carbon precincts.

Developed specifically to assist government agencies, developers and consulting firms, sustainability development consultants and urban and infrastructure planners, the Precinct Carbon Assessment Tool looks at the full life cycle carbon performance of urban precincts, including the 'hidden' carbon emissions from the production of building materials to the design and construction of whole precincts. The tool then calculates different low carbon scenarios, including carbon reductions contributed by renewable energy harvest at the precinct level. Aligned with the new National Carbon Offset Standard for Precincts, the tool can be used as both a strategic planning and project evaluation tool.

Dr Ke Xing, Program Director, University of South Australia
